The United States must continue to play this role in the 21st century. Economic growth and development are essential for peace and prosperity. The United States must continue to promote free trade and investment, and must continue to support economic development initiatives.

The United States has a long and proud history of playing a leading role in the world. The United States must continue to play this role in the 21st century. The United States must continue to be a guarantor of peace and security, a promoter of democracy and human rights, and a catalyst for economic growth and development.

The world is facing many challenges in the 21st century. The United States must work with other countries to meet these challenges. The United States must also continue to adapt its policies and strategies to meet the changing world.
