The Cherry Sisters were an American family singing group who achieved great success in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The sisters were known for their close harmonies, their beautiful voices, and their charming stage presence. They were one of the most popular singing groups of their time, and their recordings continue to be enjoyed by listeners today.

Early life

The Cherry Sisters were born into a musical family in Rockford, Illinois. Their father, Moses Cherry, was a music teacher and choir director. Their mother, Sarah Jane Cherry, was a talented singer. The sisters began singing together at a young age, and they quickly developed a close bond.

In 1873, the Cherry Sisters made their professional debut at a local church. They were an immediate success, and they soon began touring the country. The sisters' popularity grew rapidly, and they soon became one of the most popular singing groups in America.

Career

The Cherry Sisters' career spanned more than three decades. They performed throughout the United States and Europe, and they recorded dozens of songs. The sisters were known for their close harmonies, their beautiful voices, and their charming stage presence. They were also known for their sense of style, and they often wore matching gowns when they performed.

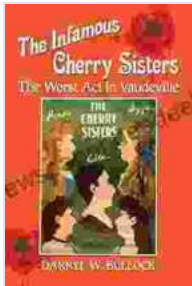

The Cherry Sisters were one of the most successful singing groups of their time. They were featured in magazines and newspapers, and they were often invited to perform at prestigious events. The sisters also made several recordings, which were very popular at the time.

Later years

The Cherry Sisters retired from performing in 1912. They had enjoyed a long and successful career, and they had made a significant contribution to American music. The sisters spent their later years in Rockford, Illinois, where they lived quietly until their deaths.

The Cherry Sisters were a remarkable singing group. They were talented, beautiful, and charming. They brought joy to millions of people with their music, and they will always be remembered as one of America's greatest singing groups.
